

The World Market Study of SCADA, Energy Management Systems and
Distribution Management Systems in Electric Utilities: 2008-2010

Newton-Evans Research Company's seventh major, in-depth international research program studying supervisory control and data acquisition (SCADA) systems, energy management systems (EMS), and distribution management systems (DMS). This study began in January 2008 and is scheduled for completion in April 2008. This four volume series will measure current market sizes and offer projections, on a world region basis, through year-end 2010.

This series will provide an appraisal of central and remote site hardware and applications software requirements that electric utilities will be requesting during their next round of procurements for these systems during the forecast period. The research program will focus on defining the broader product and market requirements that suppliers must meet in order to successfully participate in the SCADA/EMS/DMS programs within the electric utility community worldwide. The world regions in this research program include the North American, European, Latin American, MidEast, Mediterranean, African and Asia Pacific markets.
